Description Of The Event

Hansraj Dramatics Society organised its annual street theatre festival, Bolbala, at Dilli Haat, Janakpuri. The festival transformed the space into a lively hub of dafli beats, resonant slogans, and stories that spoke directly to the people.

Participating teams from across Delhi presented performances on themes such as gender justice, environmental concerns, and social equity. True to the spirit of nukkad natak, the performances blurred the line between stage and audience, inviting everyone present into the dialogue.

The evening stood out for its raw energy and immediacy—every act carried the weight of conviction; every voice found an echo. Bolbala concluded with widespread appreciation for the performers and reaffirmed the role of street theatre as a medium of both expression and social reflection.
