Event Description (About 250 Words)

On Friday 13, September 2024, the History Department successfully conducted an online screening of a documentary on the French Revolution. It was to supplement classroom learning with visual mediums. It served to inform the members of the Department, of the politics of Art in depicting Historical narratives.

The event saw active participation from the History Department, with over 30 participants joining the online platform. Faculty members, including Dr. Justin Mathew, provided valuable insights during the discussion session that followed the screening. The moderators engaged the audience with a critical review of the documentary to invite discussions. The audience actively took part in the discussion.

The primary goal of the screening was to enhance students' understanding of the French Revolution. The Department aimed to reinforce key historical concepts about the revolution's social, political, and economic impact.

The screening succeeded in stimulating thoughtful discussion and critical analysis among students. A lively Q&A session followed, where the role of class struggles, the rise of revolutionary leaders, and the long-term implications of the revolution on modern governance and human rights, were discussed. Many students expressed a deeper appreciation for the complexities of the French Revolution. The event was a successful educational experience, encouraging more such screenings in the future.
