With the situations slowing down the country due to the pandemic, the Culinary Arts Society got back on track by organising Food-o-poly, an awe-inspiring online event.

The game was a perfect blend of knowledge about food and strategy which required a dash of tactfulness and analytical skills. It consisted of two rounds, the first being the preliminary one, which judged the participants' wit and love for food. The next and the final round was based on the theme of the famous board game- Monopoly, where the participants were required to complete the dishes, by collecting ingredients, which was possible only by answering the questions asked to them.

The questions were from numerous genres like "guessing through emojis, logo guessing, flap-doodle, snap-shots and finally the trade war". They aptly made the participants brainstorm throughout the game. Over 800 registrations were received on the D2C platform after which the qualifying teams competed in the final round. The winners received exciting prizes worth 60k! and the engagement and participation of teams made this event a huge success.
