Event Description:

The Economics Society at Hansraj College organized an insightful session with Dr. Anirban Mitra, a senior lecturer from the University of Kent, focused on helping students navigate the path toward a Master's degree in Economics. His firsthand experience and practical advice made the session particularly valuable for undergraduates considering postgraduate studies.

Dr. Mitra began by sharing his personal academic journey, making the discussion relatable and grounded in real experience rather than abstract advice. He explained the factors that led him to pursue his studies abroad, addressing common concerns students have about leaving familiar environments and the benefits that international exposure brings to academic and professional development.

A significant portion of the session covered practical matters that students need to know. Dr. Mitra outlined various postgraduate courses available in economics, helping attendees understand different specializations and career trajectories. He also discussed scholarship opportunities specifically available to Indian students, demystifying the financial aspects that often create barriers to studying abroad.

The session included a clear explanation of Development Economics as a field, giving students insight into this important area of research that addresses poverty, inequality, and economic growth in developing nations. Dr. Mitra emphasized the critical role dissertations play in both academic advancement and career prospects, explaining how original research sets candidates apart.

He also shared details about his own research work, providing a window into what academic life actually looks like beyond coursework. The interactive Q&A segment allowed students to ask specific questions about application processes, research interests, balancing work and study, and career options after completing a Master's degree.

Overall, the session equipped students with both inspiration and practical information needed to make informed decisions about continuing their economics education at the postgraduate level.
