Laughs and lives, moments and memories, hard work and breath-taking performances are few phrases which might convey some parts of the amazement that “Abhiman” – the maiden annual fest of Gender Equality Cell, Hansraj College turned out to become!

The fest, taking place on Day 2 of Confluence, that is the 10th of March, began with the playing of little-known games such as “Bollywood Quiz”, “Cup Pyramid” and an all-cheered-up photo booth – all celebrating pride. While the photostat area of Hansraj College looked majestic with seven colours sprinkled on every corner of it in the form of ribbons, paperwork, plastic cups and more, it was the rainbow floating amidst the Photobooth which illustrated a completely different story! “Heck gender roles”, “Born this way”, “sipping a cup of equali-tea”, “Feminist af!” were the banners people within and outside the community proudly posed with!

At around 2 pm however, the crowd gathered in circles and smiles changed to tear-filled eyes and an outburst of emotions as the Asmita Theatre Group put up their street plays ‘Pehchaan’ and ‘Dastak’ based on the sufferings of the LGBTQ community and the unending battles of women even in today’s progressive world.
