Description of the event

Luminous Conventional Debate'23

"For good ideas and true innovation, you need human interaction, conflict, argument and debate"

A recent debate competition on the subject 'The theory of relativity has had a greater impact on modern physics than quantum mechanics' was held on March 29th by LUMEN, the physics and electronics society of Hansraj College. The b block section of Hansraj College was where the debating competition was held. The event was scheduled to start at 1:00 PM.

The team's major goal was to create a platform for anyone who was interested in science and physics to expand their scientific knowledge and polish their public speaking abilities. In today's world, a person's potential is heavily influenced by both their knowledge and their presentational skills. The theme chosen was on a current topic of research with a scope to enlighten a few towards it.

Starting off, both sides of the argument were given the chance to express their opinions for approximately 4 minutes. After that, there was a significant argument on the subject. The debating match was raised to a new level as each side shot questions at the other. Students played a significant role in the same in terms of involvement. Several of the arguments made were so rational and convincing that they not only won support from the audience but also received applause. It was evident that not just the teams but even the spectators were energised and interested. The session attracted a respectable number of attendees, and it was successfully completed with a vote of thanks for everyone who contributed to its success.
