Event Description (About 250 Words)

A field trip to Kamla Nehru Ridge, Civil Lines, was organized by the Department of Botany, Hansraj College, University of Delhi, on 26th October 2024. The objective of the trip was to provide students with insights into the ecological conservation efforts undertaken by the Delhi Development Authority in one of the major forest areas of Delhi. Upon reaching the destination, the group took a short walk and met Dr. A.K. Singh, the scientist-in-charge of the conservation and research activities in the Ridge area. Dr. Singh provided a brief overview of the historical significance of the Ridge and elaborated on the ongoing conservation strategies aimed at preserving the native biodiversity.

The flora of the Delhi Ridge is primarily characterized as thorny scrub vegetation, typical of arid and semi-arid regions. However, over time, the Ridge has transformed into a synthetic vegetative stand where native species coexist with exotic, naturalized plants. The presence of invasive species has disrupted the natural flora to some extent, posing a challenge to conservation efforts.

The field trip was an informative experience, offering students a comprehensive understanding of ecological conservation practices, the significance of biodiversity, and the challenges posed by invasive species in urban forest areas. It encouraged awareness and responsibility toward environmental preservation among the participants.
