Event Description:

Entrepreneurial Cell successfully organized Quantum Heist, an innovative online game designed to test students' logical reasoning, decision-making, and problem-solving skills. Conducted as part of the Golden and Silver Ticket round of the ongoing recruitment process, the event brought together creativity and analytical thinking in a unique and engaging format.

The game was structured into three rounds, each more challenging than the previous, and hosted through secure Google Forms. In the first round, participants were introduced to a mission brief and a building layout, after which they had to carefully select a fixed set of crew members with defined skills. This choice became the foundation for all subsequent rounds. The second round tested infiltration strategies, where sudden hurdles demanded quick yet logical responses aligned with the crew's abilities. The final round focused on the escape phase, requiring participants to craft strategies to complete their mission successfully while ensuring safe exit.

To maintain fairness, strict rules were enforced regarding participant identity, submission timelines, and single attempts. The scoring system rewarded not only correct answers but also the quality of decisions, with higher points for the most optimal choices. This structure encouraged participants to think strategically rather than rely on guesswork.

Beyond its thrilling storyline, Quantum Heist was grounded in core entrepreneurial values: analytical thinking, adaptability, and composure under pressure. Students displayed remarkable enthusiasm, applying creativity and presence of mind at every stage.

Overall, the event proved to be both exciting and meaningful, ensuring the recruitment process remained dynamic, challenging, and rewarding.
