On January 9, 2024, a session was conducted on the topic "Canva for Education" by Dr. Vidhi Khanduja (Department of Computer Science, Hansraj College) and Dr. Aman Phogat (Department of Physics, Hansraj College) at Computer Science Lab, Block B, 2nd Floor, Hansraj College. The objective of the session was to provide participants a thorough understanding of Canva, an online graphic design tool. The session focused on equipping attendees with the skills to create appealing designs for education purposes, with a focus on invitation cards and presentations in particular.

An introduction of Canva's advanced features and capabilities was given by Dr. Vidhi Khanduja. She led participants through a practical demonstration of how to create a presentation using Canva and discussed the value of graphic design in a wide range of scenarios. Afterwards, Dr. Aman Phogat also conducted a hands-on session on Canva invitation card design. In both sessions, practical exercises included template selection, text addition, image insertion, and design element exploration.

Comprehensive instruction was provided on how to download Canva to desktop, how to log in, select templates and custom designs based on the need, access Canva icons, set a background, look through available layouts and themes, edit and add text, alter fonts and colors, adjust spacing and layout, and add decorative elements, and also to insert image from desktop or upload from a vast library that Canva offers. In-depth training was also given on how to download, save and share it so that several people could work on a particular template.

On the third day of the One Week Workshop for Non-teaching Staff, the participants were privileged to engage with the erudition of Dr. Ravikant Prasad, Assistant Professor in the Department of Physics at Hansraj College, University of Delhi. The session was planned with focus on various aspects of procurements procedures in Govt. department. Procurement is the acquisition of goods and/or services. Proper procurement will result in the goods/services are appropriate and that they are procured at the best possible cost to meet the needs of the agency in terms of quality and quantity, time, and location. Participants were enlightened about the e-Tendering Central Govt. Portal https://eprocure.gov.in/eprocure/app. Mostly the emphasis were made on how to search the tender at various stages, how to write the summary of bid opening, how to publish a bid etc. In more detail we discussed the rule 149, which permits us for procurement from Government-e-Marketplace, an online portal for procurements of Goods and Services managed by the central Government of India. During the elaboration of rule 149 i.e. about GeM procurement, live demo was also done for the participants for procurement through Direct, L1 or Comparison mode and how to publish Bid on GeM. They were made aware to how to select the various filters before ordering any product so that they get best value of money. At the end of the session, questions from participants were addressed by the speaker. Although the time was limited, so some of the other aspects (services procurement) were not being explained to the participants.

The second session of the day was conducted by Psychologist Rachel Alice on 'Work Life Balance in Digital Age'. She started with a meditation activity that allowed the participants to be grounded and relaxed, be grateful for the previous year, and hopeful for 2024. It was followed by an art-based therapy activity which helped them understand how the past events have helped them reach where they are today. They were taught how to monitor their screen time and have monthly digital detox to work more towards their goals in life. It was an engaging and interactive seminar, overall.
